THE "RUSSIANS" WHO FOOLED THE POLICE*Americans In The Pub Were Friendly

London, July 19.
 Two Cypriot garage mechanics who dressed up as Russian Air Force officers and mixed with American airmen in the public houses of Bedford completely fooled a British policeman.

He detained the two men and their companion and they spent more than two hours in a local police station before being allowed to leave for London.
 Mr. Trevor Cochran, a Londoner, who drove the two Cypriots to Bedford, said they had hired two Russian-style uniforms from a London tailor.
 The Americans were completely taken in by the blue tunics, the red and blue caps and the red stars.
 "In the pubs they came over and asked to be introduced to the two Russians.
 "As the two Cypriots speak only broken English, that was a help. We called them Captain Delusov and Lieutenant Zarucki. The Americans were certainly very friendly to them.
 "Then a British police officer came up and asked me who they were. I said they were on a tour of British towns meeting the people.
 "He said he did not want to disturb them by asking questions and went off to check.
 "More police arrived and we were all taken to Bedford police station.
 "At the police station the officer we had taken in was annoyed, but a chief detective inspector was rather amused and said we were a lot of devils.
 "He took all the film we had taken of the Russians with the Americans and said it would cause international trouble if it got out.

Meet The People

John Calvert, the actor-manager whose yacht, Sea Fox, lies wrecked off Elcho Island, Northern Territory, owner of Jimmy, has received permission from quarantine officers to bring the chimp into Australia.
 Under strict quarantine laws Jimmy was unable to be "sentenced to death" if he was landed on Northern Territory mainland.
 Calvert has given Jimmy, now 7, to Sir Edward, President of the Tjironga Park Zoo, Sydney.

The Uniforms

"He said the security people would look into the easy way we had hired these uniforms, for six guineas.
 "Then we were allowed to go at about 2 a.m. and drove back to London. We gave a hitch-hiker a lift and when he got in he looked very scared."

Cheetah (Of Tarzan's) Films To Have New Home In Sydney

Sydney, July 19.
 Jimmy, Tarzan's "almost human" chimpanzee, is safe.

John Calvert, the actor-manager whose yacht, Sea Fox, lies wrecked off Elcho Island, Northern Territory, owner of Jimmy, has received permission from quarantine officers to bring the chimp into Australia.

Under strict quarantine laws Jimmy was unable to be "sentenced to death" if he was landed on Northern Territory mainland.

Calvert has given Jimmy, now 7, to Sir Edward, President of the Tjironga Park Zoo, Sydney.

Sir Edward is expected to go to Darwin next week to arrange for Jimmy's trip to his new home.

Jimmy, who has appeared in the Hollywood Tarzan series under the name of Cheeta, was left behind on Elcho Island when Calvert beached the leaking Sea Fox. —Reuter.

UK Detectives Beat Up Jamaican

Birmingham, July 19.
 TWO British detectives were found guilty here yesterday of assaulting a 28-year-old Jamaican during questioning about his behaviour towards a white woman in the street.

Detective Sergeant Ronald Hutchings, 30, was fined £100 or 12 months imprisonment and Detective Constable James Geddes, 31, was fined £25 or three months imprisonment.

They had pleaded not guilty to assaulting Rufus Augustus Thomas in April, causing him bodily harm.
 Thomas had said the two men struck him several times, kned him in the stomach and kicked him during questioning at a local police station.

He said he was also made to bow to a uniformed police officer who entered the room.

The recorder told the two men: "There can be no doubt whatever that on the honourable conduct of officers in interrogating suspects depends the very life-blood of English justice."

He could not believe that the assault was other than a "hilarious lapse," possibly caused by a feeling to take the law into their own hands and punish "Thomson" for molesting the woman. —China Mail Special.

32 Injured In Bus, Tram Crash

Rome, July 19.
 Thirty-two passengers were injured when a bus and a tram collided in a Rome street tonight. Fuming cars rushed the injured to hospital.

Police said later none of the injured were in a serious condition. Most of them would be out of hospital in a few days, they said. —Reuter.

Record Speeding Offence?

My Mistake, Said Magistrate

London, July 19.
 It would have been the biggest speeding offence of all time—if the magistrate's mental arithmetic had been right.

Mr. Leo Gladwell, magistrate at Old Street Court, London, worked out the speed that a motorist had been travelling at 3,600 miles an hour—over 100 times the legal speed limit of 30 miles per hour in a built-up area in Britain.

"I think that's much too fast for London," he remarked with a smile.
 But subsequent questions to a police witness cut the accused driver's speed quite a bit.

The policeman said that the car took 10-1/5 seconds to cover 220 yards.

Said Mr. Gladwell: "I thought it was suggested that he did it in a fifth of a second or 3,600 miles an hour."

 But even then the magistrate's mental arithmetic was not right. For to cover 220 yards in one-fifth of a second, a car would have to travel at 2,250 miles per hour. —China Mail Special.

Kassem Threatens Kirkuk Rebels

'CAPABLE OF CRUSHING ANYBODY'

Bagdad, July 19. — MAJOR GENERAL Abdul Karim Kassem, Iraqi Prime Minister, said tonight he would take the severest action against those responsible for recent incidents in Kirkuk, a northern oil town.

General Kassem, addressing a mass prayer meeting at St Joseph's Catholic Church, strongly denounced the incidents and declared: "I am capable of crushing anybody who opposes the sons of the people because this is anathema."

Bloody clashes in Kirkuk and fighting in other centres marked the first anniversary last week of the Iraqi revolution, correspondents arriving in Beirut from Baghdad reported today.

Other newspaper reports from Cairo said full-scale civil war threatened in Iraq after hundreds had been killed and injured in communal fighting. The correspondents reaching Beirut said because of the strict censorship imposed in Iraq by the regime of General Kassem there was no news direct from Baghdad.—Reuter.

Bronze Age Village

Valletta, July 19. — Dr D. Trump, Archaeology Curator of the Malta Museum, has unearthed a Bronze Age village in the west of the island. It was officially stated here.

One hut and most of a second have been completely cleared. Articles found include a large stone mortar for pounding grain, (ground-threshers), pottery jars and cups. One of the querns is made of lava imported from Sicily.

The village is believed to date from about 1350 BC.—Reuter.

once in this Court where a different standard of proof is required," his Honour said.

A magistrate would not be influenced by the decision in this case if he were to try the criminal charge at some time subsequent to the decision in this case, his Honour said. He (the Magistrate) had to consider if the prosecution had discharged the onus of proof beyond reasonable doubt, while looking for corroboration, warning himself at the same time that it would be unsafe to convict a man on the uncorroborated evidence of the prosecution.

In the civil case, however, the standard of proof required was of the balance of probabilities or the preponderance of probabilities as between the case for the plaintiff and the case for the defendant.

Conclusion

His Honour said he had seen both the plaintiff and Miss Sul Ping giving their testimony. "I have come to the conclusion that the evidence of Sul Ping is to be believed."

"To the question: 'Insofar as these words were statements of facts, were they true in substance and in fact?' My answer therefore is 'Yes'."

His Honour then dealt with the question whether the words were fair comment in the matter of public interest.

"Being a matter which could fairly be said to invite comment or to challenge public attention and also being, as I have found true in substance and in fact, a person commenting is given wide latitude provided the comment is an honest expression of the defendant's real opinion as warranted by the facts truly stated in the sense that a fair-minded man might upon those facts bona fide hold their opinion," his Honour said.

Examining

"Examining again these words in the light of what I have said and considering these comments as a jury would have to consider them, I cannot and in them anything that could be said to travel beyond the limits of fair criticism."

"My answer then to this question is 'Yes'."

"For these reasons I have set out, this action is therefore dismissed with costs."

EX-MAYOR DIES IN ROBBERY

London, July 20. — Police throughout Britain today were seeking two men in a shabby blue van following an £8,000 robbery which resulted in the death of a former mayor.

The dead man, 64-year-old Solomon Lever, was the Mayor of Hackney, east London, in Coronation Year.

His body was found dumped on the roadside in Epping Forest, on the north-eastern fringe of London, yesterday.

Polish-born Lever, a well-known member of the Jewish community in Hackney, had apparently died of a heart attack while bound and gagged.

Lever had been lured from his home early yesterday by a telephone call from a man who said he was a detective.

The man told Lever that a timber store next to his office was on fire and they understood he had a large sum of money in his safe.—China Mail Special.

Peter The Great's Toys Found?

Moscow, July 19. — Fragments of toys, Peter the Great may have played with, have been found during excavations on the construction site of the Kremlin, Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported.

Tass said during the excavations the ruins of the chambers of Queen Natalia—Peter the Great's mother—were also uncovered. The chambers were built in the 1770-85.—Reuter.

The guard at St James's Palace, which includes Clarence House, where the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret live, and York House, home of the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, is also smaller.

Reason for the smaller guards at the two palaces, according to the War Office, is an experiment in the more economical use of manpower.

The experiment will last through the whole of this month.

Garden Sentries

The guard at Buckingham Palace, which has been the London home of the British Sovereign since Queen Victoria's accession in 1837, has been reduced from 24 to 15, and that at St James's Palace from 18 to 15.

What is happening is that the sentry duties at the two palaces are being reduced while the sentries in the gardens are being dispensed with.

The garden sentries, in the view of the military authorities, "no longer serve any useful purpose."

The gardens, in any case, are patrolled by policemen with, in some cases, police dogs.

A War Office spokesman said: "It is an experiment and nothing more, in a more practical approach to the job of guarding the palaces."

"If it works out satisfactorily, the change may become a permanent one."

Eight Battalions

The spokesman said that as part of the Army cut-back, the Household Brigade was being reduced in size.

The 3rd Battalion Coldstream Guards which trooped the colour recently on the Queen's birthday would soon be disbanded.

The 3rd Battalion Grenadier Guards was due to be disbanded sometime before the end of 1962.

"That," said the spokesman, "will bring down the strength of the Brigade from 10 battalions to eight."

In Turn

In the past the three Guards battalions stationed in London have taken it in turn to provide the Sovereign's guard for 24 hours at a time.

The new experiment is in having each of the three battalions provide the Queen's guard for a month at a time, leaving the other two battalions to concentrate on training.—China Mail Special.

Hannibal's Expedition In Doubt

Rome, July 19. — Two British historians, anxious to prove that the Carthaginian General Hannibal launched his elephant-borne expedition against Rome 2,000 years ago through the Modona Pass and not the St Bernard Pass, arrived at Montemilano tonight with their "guinea pig", a sturdy young Italian-born elephant "Jumbo."

The Britons, John Hoyle and Richard Jolly, aided by veterinary surgeon Colonel John Hitchman, were given a tremendous welcome by the local population at Montemilano and also by the British and Italian consuls.

They hope to prove, by crossing the Alps in Hannibal's "fabled" time of nine days that this was the route he used rather than the St Bernard route classically ascribed to him.

Jumbo—who carries his own enormous fodder of hay with him—will subsequently be returned to the Turin zoo to which he belongs.—AP.

World's Shortest Runway

Engineers of North American Aviation have devised the world's shortest runway. This runway runs uphill for one foot at an angle of 20 degrees and at the snap of a switch launches an F-100 into the air. Within four seconds the aircraft is travelling at 275 m.p.h. The runway consists of a single, two-channel, of which hold the wheel of the aircraft in place. This picture shows an F-100 at the time of take-off and the clouds of flame and smoke provided by the XH-34 booster rocket engine.—Central Press Photo.

Police Search For Gaol Escapee Hinds

London, July 19. — A new police search began tonight for Britain's ace gaol breaker, Alfred Hinds, after a note was thrown from the window of a Portsmouth to Waterloo train.

The note read: "Hinds is on the train accompanied by a woman."

Police rushed to Waterloo station and scrutinised every passenger passing through the barrier but there was no sign of Hinds.

Later the train was searched without success.

Hinds, aged 41, was gaoled for 12 years in 1953 for his part in a £38,000 London robbery but has escaped three times during his sentence.

On each occasion, he has flooded the press and of Parliament with protestations about his innocence.

Since his last escape in June last year, he has been reported as having been in many places in Britain, France, Belgium and the Irish Republic.—China Mail Special.

Half Million People See PI Jamboree

Jamboree City, Philippines, July 19. — A traffic jam 20 miles long stretched out to Jamboree City from Manila today as more than half a million Sunday trippers flocked here to view the international gathering of Boy Scouts from 61 countries.

A tropical rainstorm which had dampened yesterday's official opening ceremonies held off today and by noon the cars were three and four deep 15 miles from the campsite.

Today was Philippine Day, with overseas delegates watching native games and folk dances, Philippine music, a parade of local beauties and a fireworks display.

Examination

But the 10th world jamboree was marred by an accident today. Two young Philippine boys were taken to hospital with internal injuries after being hit by a fire truck on the campsite.

Camp officials said a total of 81 boys had been treated at the camp hospital for minor ailments and that all of the Scouts were having a full medical examination.

The officials said they were watching out particularly for any adverse effect of local climatic conditions on the 3,000 visiting overseas Scouts.

The British contingent have amazed local people by their prodigious consumption of tea—six gallons for 40 boys at breakfast and equally staggering quantities throughout the remainder of the day.—Reuter.

Rolled Over Cliff In Sleep

Brighton, July 19. — A 22-year-old London student who spent the night sleeping in the open air on a South coast cliff-top, was found dead today on rocks 60 feet below.

He was believed to have turned over in his sleep and rolled over the top.

A fellow-student who had camped with him at Salsdon near Brighton during a motor-cycle holiday, woke to find him missing and informed the police.

The dead youth was Martin Langford, who was studying medicine.—China Mail Special.

Survival Test In French Alps

St Jean de Maurienne, July 19.

Fourteen people, five of them women, dressed in city clothes and without equipment of any kind, tonight settled down to spend 48 hours 9,900 feet up in the snows of the French Alps.

They were without food but were observed by a team of doctors, psychologists, biologists and rescue experts.

They are a group of volunteers from France, Italy, Switzerland, Sweden and Germany who are taking part in "Operation Survival 3,000"—an experiment aimed at trying out the latest techniques in survival, organised by a private body with French Government backing.

As darkness fell tonight, the volunteers started to build an igloo with their bare hands as shelter for the night.

After remaining isolated for 48 hours, supplies of food and camping equipment will be parachuted to the igloo where the group will then stay a further six days before being "rescued" by mountain rescue teams.

Observers will watch how efficiently they can build the igloo without tools and how well they fare in combatting cold and boredom.—Reuter.

Police named the youth as John Crump and his companion as John Edward Davis and said they drove to Quaker after drinking in a nearby village.

They entered the shop of 37-year-old Lynn Barr and, while he was making sandwiches for them, shot him through the head with a shotgun, police said.

Afterwards they went to the house and demanded Barr's car from the shopkeeper's wife. They shot her twice and beat the couple's two daughters. One died from injuries.

Without an ignition key, the youths could not start the car and were caught by local residents before they got very far.

Police said the youths were being held in gaol but that no charges had yet been made.—Reuter.

Long Liked Preacher's Attack

El Paso, Texas, July 19. — Gov. Earl Long went to church today and heard a sermon on repentance. He couldn't wait to get outside for a smoke, but said he liked the way the preacher "pumped it to 'em."

Dr W. Herachol Ford, Pastor of the First Baptist Church, said: "Whether saint or sinner, repent, repent, repent."

After the sermon, 13 persons went to the front and joined the church. It impressed the Louisiana Governor.

"That's the way you've got to do it," Long commented. "You gotta pump it to 'em and pump it to 'em. Just like I do in politics... hit 'em and hit 'em again so they don't miss what you mean."

IN TUSSELE

The story Governor, who only yesterday got into a tussle with a sheriff at Ruidoso Downs race track in New Mexico and launched such an obscene tirade that he was tactfully tossed out, was a much different man at church today.

He watched his language, joked with aides and newsmen, patted children on the head, and talked in hushed tones with ushers and "greeters" at the door.

At church with him were J. W. (Fate) Hensley, Louisiana Racing Commission chairman, a state policeman serving as a chauffeur and two reporters.

Long told Menefee to put into the collection plate "everything you won at the track yesterday." Menefee dropped in $10. Long put in $5.

FIDGITED

The sermon was 35 minutes long. The Governor fidgeted in his seat. Once he cleared his throat and spat on the floor. During the last 20 minutes of the sermon he fondled a cigarette, put it to his lips several times and once attempted to strike a match, but an aide suggested he wait until he could get to the toilet.

Long kept glancing at his watch and asking "how much longer? How much longer?"

The Governor said he planned to go to Juarez this afternoon and attend the bullfight at the Plaza Monumental despite the objections of his personal physician.—UPI.

'Big Time' Youths Leave Trail Of Deaths

Quaker, Miss., July 19. — A 19-year-old youth told police here today he shot a shopkeeper dead, beat to death a 17-year-old girl and seriously injured two other people because he and a 14-year-old friend "wanted to go out and have a big time."

Police named the youth as John Crump and his companion as John Edward Davis and said they drove to Quaker after drinking in a nearby village.

They entered the shop of 37-year-old Lynn Barr and, while he was making sandwiches for them, shot him through the head with a shotgun, police said.

LIGHTNING KILLS FOUR

New York, July 19. — Two lightning flashes and a subway fire, brought Sunday afternoon death to four persons and injury to 41 others in New York City today.

Four persons were killed by a lightning bolt in a sudden thunderstorm at Orchard Beach in the Bronx.

Another bolt sent five persons to a hospital when it struck a tree in the Bronx during the brief storm.

At least 38 persons on two subway trains were overcome by smoke that billowed through a tunnel under the East River linking Manhattan and Queens.

Within minutes an entire block of 42nd Street was sealed off to traffic and was turned into an emergency first-aid ward to treat victims of the subway fire.

Police said the four lightning fatalities were waiting for a bus when the thunderstorm struck.

The five injured persons had huddled under the tree to take refuge from the brief downpour.—UPI.

LOGAN GOURLAY

WHO KNOWS AND TELLS IN HIS UNMISTAKABLE WAY

WHO, for Pete's sake, is Li'l Abner? And Daisy Mae? And Jack S. Thogbound? Not to mention Moonbeam MacSwine. You don't really know. Yet they're probably better known in the United States than Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhower or Marilyn Monroe. They've certainly more faithful and dedicated followers.

Li'l Abner and his oddly named group are characters in a cartoon strip read avidly every day by about 50,000,000 Americans of all ages and types. They are the creations of Mr. Al Capp, a plumpish, genial, Bostonian with an artificial leg, who might have stumped straight out of a cartoon himself.

Facially he looks a bit like Bob Hope. And, of course, he also has a highly developed sense of humour.

Here is a small example of Capp humour.

As we sat over lunch the other day on the open-air terrace of a Mayfair club he waved to Doug Fairbanks Jun. in another table.

"That reminds me," said Mr. Capp, "of the time I was being interviewed in a Boston hotel by a girl reporter. She asked the idea of interviewing me instead of Gary Cooper or one of the handsome movie stars. I tried hard but I couldn't impress that gal at all."

"Finally, when we were leaving the hotel, a good-looking guy came over and said: 'May I introduce my self? I'm Douglas Fairbanks and I've always wanted to meet you. I'm a great fan of Li'l Abner. I don't usually do this, but may I have your autograph?'"

Stunned

"Well, that gal was stunned. A movie star asking for my autograph. Now she was for me all the way. But it was too much for me."

"Deadpan," I said to Fairbanks. "Now you can tell it off. You're a good actor for an amateur. Go back to work and be careful with that lovely jerk hat."

I told the girl she was a soda jerk from down the street who looked like Fairbanks. I said I employed him occasionally just to impress people."

At that moment Doug Fairbanks Jun. came over to the table to shake hands. At least, I think it was Fairbanks.

When he left, Mr. Capp took up the subject of his meetings from Li'l Abner and Co. A serious subject for Mr. Capp. "I was brought up during the depression and I don't wanna be poor again."

"I admit I like dough. Lots of it. And I admit I do it for the dough. Hell, there's no other incentive for any kind of artist or creator."

THIS IS ME-BY
THE CREATOR OF LI'L ABNER...

"But I never see the dough. My manager takes it all and gives me pocket money."

Basic formula

I asked Mr. Capp, who has been drawing his full Sunday strip for 25 years plus a full Sunday page, where and how he got his inspiration.

"I don't know. I've got two assistants. They listen to my ideas at the story conference and then say: 'We'll use this one. It's the best.'"

"The basic formula is a mixture of sex, death, and money. Get all three in one strip and, brother, you're in business. They're universal."

"The strip is syndicated all over the world. Even in Japan I hear about it. Everywhere except here. That burns me up a bit."

As a fun it burns me up too, but of course it burns up Mr. Capp much more.

P.S. If you can't see Li'l Abner, I offer the above drawing done on the back of a menu. It's supposed to be me, but I've come out looking a bit like Li'l Abner, when I don't resemble, in any way. He's a hero—good and true and pure."

SIGNS OF LONDON: A young lady—an attractive one—hurry-ing down Park Lane with a milk can over her shoulders. High-heeled shoes, and not one of them a bikini.

I was afraid to ask her why.

The Russian

I went to one of these exotic parties with a band specialty flown. I was told, from the Continent. I asked the leader, in Russian costume, where he was from.

The reply: "I'm Johnny Franks from Charing Cross Road and I hired the costume from Jack Hilton."

Among his souvenirs

Mr. William Hoffman, manager of the Savoy Hotel, has shown me a letter he received. I quote:—

"Approximately 15 years ago in a burst of boyishness I purchased a small demi-tasse spoon while dining at your establishment."

"Since my wife and I plan to be in London soon it occurred to me that this souvenir would be of more use back with its rightful owners."

The writer is a Les Angeles architect. The spoon, an obsolete pattern, has now a place of honour on the desk of Mr. Hoffman, who offered a new pattern spoon as a souvenir.

The honest architect refused.

from Gauray to Anne Scott-James:— I met a new English starlet recently who tries to develop the Continental Bardot look.

They all try it nowadays, but this one succeeds more than most. She has changed her name to Shiril Scott-James because, she says, after reading you, she thinks the name Scott-James is associated with class and quality. Are you flattered?

Will Chessman die?

SO Caryl Chessman is to die after all.

I wonder...

This is the thought that came to mind on learning that the California Supreme Court had rejected yet another appeal by Chessman, 37-year-old gunman, and confirmed the death sentence passed on him eleven years ago.

By Ron Evans

His execution will take place "within 30 to 90 days," ordered the Court.

Will he? Or is this just another shameful chapter in the fantastic life-death drama of Caryl Chessman.

Time near

The judge and several of the jurymen who sentenced him have since died. And 60 other prisoners have taken their last walk past his cell.

"When they came to the cell next door you knew their time was near," he told me in his quiet, unemotional monotone. "You heard the footsteps clatter away down the corridor. Then it was quiet. When you heard the wheel-cart come to take away his things you knew he had died."

Will the wheel-cart come to take away his things? Or will Chessman find another loophole in the small print?

I don't know, but one thing is certain. The final verdict in the case of Caryl Chessman will land America guilty. It's a law that has made a sickening part-time of dealing with one man's destiny.

China Mail writer John Luff digs up once again the famous case of 'The Winslow Boy' and discovers some new facts, about...

THE DAY THE ROYAL NAVY GOT A PASTING

SOME who follow the fortunes of our local players might recall that two years ago, the Hongkong Stage Club produced "The Winslow Boy." I was sent along to write up the performance.

In spite of the fact that Terence Rattigan is the author of the play, it dropped here, and myself, depressed by rows of empty chairs for neighbours, wrote in my critique that the contrapuntal theme of the play is a matter of honour, "but such a code is at a discount these days."

I think I had the idea of starting something. I thought my line was ironical, but someone took me at my word, and wrote in ticking me off for slighting honour so.

DISMISS

Let that be as it may, I had at the back of my mind the idea that "The Winslow Boy" was founded on a true situation, and I would like to know more about it.

I asked many people about it, but I knew anything quite a number of people who came from Liverpool incidentally, but they could tell me only what I knew already, that "The Winslow Boy" was founded on to obtain a straight answer from a bureaucratic department.

In spite of it all, Archer-Shee senior, bank manager, cleared his desk for nothing, and sailed as saucily to the fray, as ever did a British frigate engage an enemy cruiser.

The heart-breaking thing about the whole affair was that Archer-Shee could not get to grips with the enemy. They hid behind their inviolable position. For the Navy, on paper, belonged to Edward the Seventh, and the King is above the law.

More to it than that, things were not working out too badly. George Archer-Shee had entered Osborne from Stourhead, the Catholic College, and they were sent him back, and accepted the boy's word of honour that he was not a thief.

But the father was backed up by his elder son, a major with a DSO, and a Member of Parliament also, and with this in mind, he decided to go the whole hog.

He suffered socially for this, and was extremely unpopular in the best clubs. "After all, man," the Navy doesn't make mistakes of that kind. No, I'm not saying the boy did take the money, but there must be something to it."

DEADLY
But Archer-Shee, having decided on his course, refused to turn back. He returned to Edward Carson, then at the zenith of his career. It seems strange that this powerful advocate is remembered to this day as the man who brought the exile Oscar Wilde down on his knees. Why no further enquiry for this far greater action?

However, first Carson wanted to satisfy himself as to the boy's innocence.

Rattigan makes this one of the big scenes of the play as the deadliest exponent of the art of cross-examination subjected young George Archer-Shee to the severest going-over the child ever experienced.

He reduced the lad to tears, then rose and said: "The boy is innocent. I accept the case."

Now what Sir Edward had to do was to get at the fact and to that, the boy had, by becoming that strange creature, a cadet, forfeited for the time being even such privileges as a court martial might bestow.

That does not mean, of course, that the Navy just threw him out in cavalier fashion, but it does mean that during such proceedings the Navy instituted, young Archer-Shee was not represented and could not speak on his own behalf.

At any rate, Carson was not the man to be put off by sheer obstinate stupidity, bureaucratic otherwise, and the case got as far as the Judge Advocate. The Archer-Shees were kept outside the room. This followed: "...and My Lords desire me to say that the further enquiry is to be made at which a representative of your side in the sense in which you use the word would be appropriate."

By this time, Carson did not give a damn as to what was appropriate or inappropriate, he was determined to get the case into court, and give it an airing in public. But how?

And what made it worse was, Sir Rufus Isaacs soon to become the Lord Chief Justice, was on the other side. No matter what Sir Rufus's own feelings were about the rights of one insignificant boy, as Solicitor General, he had to represent My Lords of the Admiralty.

Now there exists in England an ancient privilege, long neglected, and rusty from neglect. It is known as the Privilege of the Individual.

Slowly, the facts, so stupidly repressed by official bureaucracy, tumbled out, and how pathetically forlorn they were as Carson picked them up and presented them to England.

First young Archer-Shee did not need the money, he had ample cash, and by merely signing a check, he could have all the money a young lad could need.

Next, young Cadet Terence Back who reported the to think could never be got over. Somehow, all England sensed what was happening. It was not Archer-Shee alone, but some how, ensnared within the compass of the court was that most inviolable sovereignty—the rights of the individual.

What Carson had to do was to find a situation by which he could invoke this Privilege. To do this, he had to establish the notion whereby it could be proved that the King of England had broken faith with one of his subjects, in this case with George Archer-Shee.

If this could be done, then the King could be approached, and

His Majesty would write across the Petition, "Let Right Be Done." The King could then be taken to Court as any other commoner.

Those who have dealt with Government departments readily appreciate that My Lords of the Admiralty did not accept Carson's suggestion with any marked enthusiasm.

The barricades of obstruction were thrown up. The Admiralty sheltered behind huge files, and tried to the Carson's hands with tape, but slowly and painfully he proceeded. The case was no longer lost. It was discussed in Parliament.

It was discussed in Parliament, and soon all England was talking of George Archer-Shee and the Admiralty.

Two years it took, two long years of unbearable anxiety, but on a hot day in July, 1910, two years after the postal order was stolen, the case came before a jury in the King's Bench Division.

I realise I am becoming like Caryl in style, but it seems the best way to tell it.

ALL ALONE
Now Carson is on his feet. He goes straight into the attack. He speaks of Archer-Shee.

"His son was branded as a thief and as a forger. A boy thirteen years old and has been labelled and ticketed for all his future life, as a thief and a forger, and in such investigation as led to that disastrous result, neither his father nor any friend was ever there to hear one word of what was said against a boy of thirteen, who by that one letter, and by that one determination was absolutely deprived of the possibility of any future career either in His Majesty's Service, or indeed in any other service."

Strong stuff this, and the other side sat up, remembering that their witnesses are to be cross-examined, by the formidable Carson, and remembering more comfortably that they have the protection of Sir Rufus Isaacs.

Carson fires a broadside that My Lords would fain dodge. "I protest against that boy at that early stage, a boy of that character, being branded for the rest of his life by that one act, an irretrievable act that one victor to think could never be got over."

Archer-Shee was missing. Carson had a sense of drama, and it seems that turning round to the boy in Court, and shaking his youthful hand was one of the things he was looking forward to.

And as in the play, young Archer-Shee wasn't there. Later he called at the Law Courts to thank Sir Edward. Where had he been? He had overslept. Well, could you say?—He had overslept.

There the play ends, but as I said at the beginning, I know one or two things more.

The first is, who is going to pay for all this, and what are my Lords going to do about compensating young Archer-Shee? Two years have gone by, and he can't go back. Probably doesn't want to return to Osborne.

Well, as most of these huge bureaucratic departments, the Navy had a big dose of sulks. They had apologised, they were not going to do any more. And so on.

Oh, were they not? An M.P. or two had other ideas upon the subject, and in that typical English way of beating about the bush, got things going, Mr. Cave, Member for Kingston, proposed that the salary of the First Lord of the Admiralty be reduced by £100.

BLACKMAIL
I am quite sure the First Lord would have agreed to this if he could have been spared what followed. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, soon to be the first Prime Minister representing the welfare of the people, was the only voice heard championing the Navy. He said it was blackmail to get the Archer-Shee case heard in Parliament by such tactics.

Well, the Navy got what Nelson gave out so often. A real pasting. Any real English contempt for trying to hide behind legalism. So they promised to pay £7,120, which they did, ungraciously, and then went away to sulks. But not for long. War was not far off.

Mr. Archer-Shee died soon after the triumph of his son. And young Archer-Shee? Well, he went to America, for although he seems to have been real English in that he showed no malice, as he grew up, he must have seen how badly he had been treated.

Now work it out. He was thirteen in 1908, so that makes him nineteen in 1914. England was at war. So he returned to England and joined, no, not the Navy, but the Army, in the Second Battalion of the South Staffordshire Regiment.

He earned a commission, and as Second Lieutenant, George Archer-Shee he fell at the Battle of Ypres, October 1914.

There should be a moral to all this, but I can't find it, but when I consider how since the war I have been behind both the Iron and Bamboo Curtains, and have been in every so many places where they shouted about freedom I would like to know where in the world you would find the whole State turned upside down to establish the rights of the individual—but in England?

The second warlike moral is a bit. The whole world seems to me to be turning into one vast, bureaucratic machine, and the Lord helps the poor individual caught up in its cog.

COLLAPSE

Was she sure? Well, she had a lot to do. Look after the Post Office, answer the phone, boys were always coming in and out. She was always having to go into the back room. Suppose while she was in the back another Cadet took the place of the one she had been serving? Would she notice? No, all Cadets looked the same to her.

And so on. The day for the Lords collapsed, for on the fourth day, the Solicitor General announces that there is nothing to proceed with.

Carson must have given a bit of give and take, for after the collapse of My Lords, he stated he attributed no bad faith to them, and that they had acted in a manner they considered proper, and as for Miss Tucker (and how disastrous had been her evidence) Carson said she was not malicious but mistaken.

Well, there was much handshaking in Court, and congratulations all round, but young

YOUR BIRTHDAY...By STELLA

MONDAY, JULY 20

BORN today, you have a fine mind, but one too often concerned with trivialities rather than with significant matters. You can use as much mental energy over a detail which could be easily delegated to someone else as you do over a major project. Learn to conserve your energies by planning and directing others who do the manual labour.

Fortunately, your temperament makes it easy for you to get along with all kinds of people. To reach exceptional heights of achievement, you must always take the initiative. You are a little too inclined to wait for someone else to start. You are a great reader. Apt to let opportunities slip by, you may find it almost impossible to make up for lost time when you do get going!

TUESDAY, JULY 21

CANCER (June 22-July 23)—Be cheerful and thoroughly cooperative with everyone if you want the best possible results.

LEO (July 24-Aug. 23)—Guard against an unexpected health upset. Otherwise, all goes well with you. Postpone a trip?

VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23)—A tremendous increase in your activity. Be sure it is successful. So entirely it is.

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23)—Wisdom in everything is necessary today. Don't be too impulsive. Think matters over.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)—Things are happening almost faster than you can wish. Just take first things first.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22)—Major objectives move right ahead. If you know where you're headed, you'll get there now.

Kind and considerate, you have a high sense of responsibility toward those you love. You will make a fine marriage partner. Don't let timidity keep you from expressing affection for the one you love. For the best happiness, select someone born under Sagittarius or Capricorn. Don't take family responsibilities too seriously; raising a family can be fun, if you cultivate a sense of humour.

Among those born on this date are: Augustin Daly, actor and theatre manager; John Dillmore, Scottish intermar and diplomat; Thomas Lovell Beddoes, poet; Count Hermann Keyserling, Social philosopher; Francesco Petrarca, Italian poet.

To find what the stars have in store for you tomorrow, select your birthday star and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19)—A trial and error time for all your efforts. If your first idea doesn't work out, try another.

PISCES (Feb. 20-Mar. 20)—Make sure of your direction, and then act constructively on something important to your future.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 20)—Although your best day of the week, it's not a time to depend upon others. Make your own decisions.

TAURUS (Apr. 21-May 21)—If possible, postpone travelling until tomorrow. Best stick to routine today.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21)—Not your day for experimentation. Test everything first, avoid risks, stay calm and act intelligently.

Hats to make heads turn...

by BARBARA GRIGGS

ONCE asked one of the most successful milliners in Paris, a melancholy 21-year-old boy, why he liked to see a woman wearing a hat during the daytime.

"Because she simply does not look dressed without one," he replied.

I protested. I had hoped he would say a pretty hat makes a girl look rather good. But no. Firmly he repeated his original reply.

This is nonsense. The triumphant rise of the hairdresser has combined with the enormous popularity of the casual look (meaning anything from Chanel to Continental separates in a bourgeois high street) to outdate this attitude to hats.

FOR EVENING: A headdress of roses, made from olive green satin. Price 6 guineas.

Back again
Few women now feel that they have to wear a hat, except at a wedding or other smart occasion.

But this autumn I prophesy that a great many more women are going to want to wear a hat. The signs are clear.

HAIR will be smoother, shorter and straighter (those blown up, bloated styles were murder for the milliner).

SUITS and COATS will be waisted and belted again—a pretty, feminine line that goes with a pretty, feminine hat much more than those mannish little straight-up-and-down suits and coats.

Finally, HATS themselves look like being a pretty lot. I've been looking through some of the new autumn collections, and they are flattering, wearable, pretty—the sort that makes a messenger boy turn round and whistle.

Masses of velvet—particularly black. Masses of veiling. Masses of soft, feathery bonnets.

The two in the picture are picked from the new Christian Dior wholesale collection, designed by Yves St. Laurent, which will soon be going into the shops. Both are characteristic of the new line.

For day, a crisp, definite outline, feminised with a tall plume, and a smoky veil. For evening, cabbage roses made of thick satin, sprouting from a neat Allouard.

The Magic Telephone

—It Always Rang In A Very Strange Way—

By MAX TRELL

THE Magic Telephone rang. It was just behind the corner of the bookcase between the standing lamp and the long green drapes.

Knarf and Hand, the Shadow Children with the Turned-About Names, heard it ringing. They both ran to answer it.

The Magic Telephone didn't ring like an ordinary telephone. In fact, the most curious thing about this telephone was the strange way in which it rang.

Chirping Sound

For instance, the ring of the Magic Telephone sometimes sounded like the chirping of a Sparrow. This meant that a Bird was calling.

Sometimes the ring of the Magic Telephone sounded like the barking of a Dog, or the meowing of a Cat. This meant, of course, that a dog or a Cat was calling.

Sometimes the Telephone made a humming noise. This meant that a Bumble Bee was calling.

Crackles And Squeaks

Now and then the Magic Telephone behind the bookcase between the standing lamp and the long green drapes sounded like the chirping of a Cricket or the crackling of a Fire or the squeaking of a Mouse.

Sometimes the ring of the telephone was like a soft, furry whisper. This meant that a Caterpillar was calling.

Now, as Knarf and Hand ran toward the Telephone, they heard it ringing in a way in which it had never rung before.

Sounded Like Water

The ring of the Magic Telephone sounded like water bubbling. It also sounded like rain falling. It also sounded like water dripping from a faucet. It also sounded like water splashing in a brook.

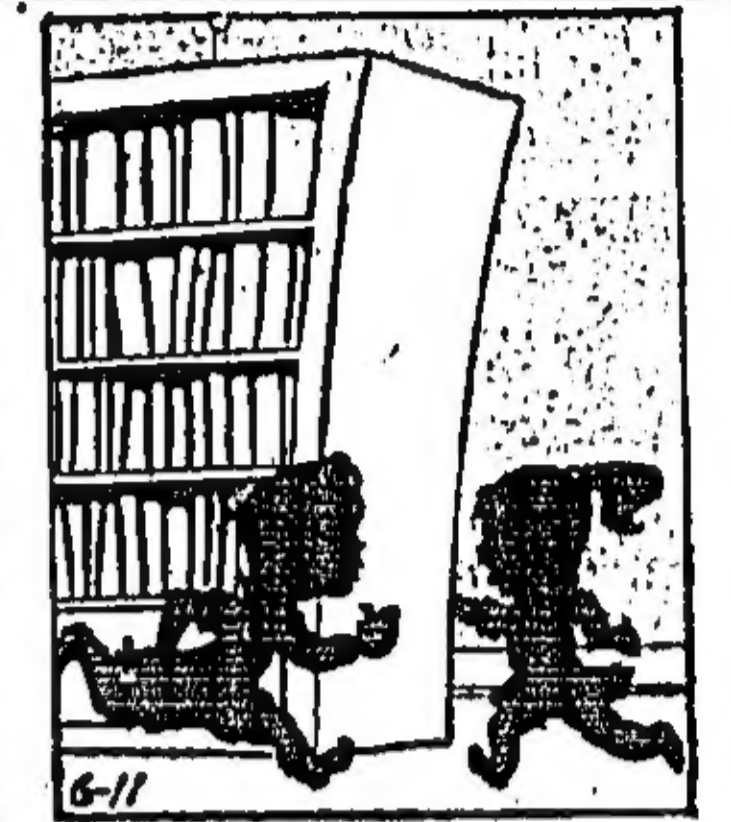

Knarf and Hand both reached for the Telephone at the same time.

Another thing that was unusual about the Magic Telephone was that instead of having just one earpiece and one mouthpiece, it had dozens of them.

Very Convenient

This made it very convenient. It meant that dozens of people could speak and listen, all at the same time.

Knarf and Hand each grabbed one of the earpieces

Knarf and Hand ran to answer the Telephone.

and mouthpieces of the Magic Telephone.

"Hello," they both said at the same time. "Who's this speaking?"

The same bubbling, dripping, splashing sound came over. Only this time it wasn't the Telephone ringing. It was the voice of somebody speaking on the other end.

Who Is It?

"Who is this?" Knarf and Hand both asked again.

"Me!" said the bubbly voice. "Tell us you?" asked Knarf.

"Who are you?" begged Hand.

"Guess!" said the voice. "I'm right in the same room with you. Look around and you'll see me."

Knarf and Hand looked around. They couldn't see anything that made a bubbly sound.

"But you're looking right at me!" the bubbly voice said again. "I'm near the window. Can't you see me?"

Near Window

"The only things near the window," said Hand, "are the Bird cage and the Aquarium. I'm sure you're not a Bird and I'm... I'm... Hand paused, because at this moment the bubbly voice at the other end of the Telephone was bubbling and splashing and rippling with laughter.

"Bahl! I knew it all the time!" Knarf said later to Hand. "It was Alphonse the Goldfish. He's down at the back of his aquarium hiding behind a water plant and telephoning us from under the water."

"Yes," said Hand, smiling. "And that's why the Telephone had a bubbly ring. It always bubbles when a fish calls."

Before long Rupert finds all his parcels, though there is no sign of the basket. Then, glancing to one side, he again spies Simple Simon sheltering under a bank and clutching his hat. "Don't look so frightened," says Rupert. "The storm seems to be over and, tell me, did you see a queer rattle?"

"Did you say here just now?" "Yes, that's a good name for the thing. I have it too. It went that way. But I was too worried about the storm that nearly blew me off my feet and my lost key to notice it much."

Household Hints

When putting away your hats, it helps to keep them in good shape.

For a shine on a man's suit, press with a hot iron over a cloth soaked in vinegar and wrung out before applying.

When making a scoop neckline, stitch in a small tape at the neck end of each shoulder. Make it of the same material as the dress, and have a press stud at the sleeve seam end. This will make a loop which will take care of peeping shoulder straps.

Give your shoes a rest frequently. Never wear the same pair two days running—it will pave the way to longer life.

Rub the shiny toe-caps of suede shoes with fine sandpaper and then hold the shoe over the steam from a kettle of boiling water. Brush over with a clean brush and the shiny surface will have disappeared.

To wash doecskin gloves use warm but not hot soapy water. Draw the gloves on the hands and wash gently as though soaping your hands. Rinse in tepid water and then in warm water containing a few drops of olive oil. Press the hands in a clean dry cloth and draw off the gloves gently. Do not pull or squeeze in any way or the gloves will dry out of shape.

Save cardboard cartons of similar shape and size and when you have enough of them fit them together in your wardrobe shelf. Covered with cold-water paint they provide neat storage for hats and handbags.

Reel canned apple slices in finely chopped pecan nuts for snacking or the salad course.

JACOBY on BRIDGE

THE trump coup consists of shortening yourself in trumps so that you won't have to lead up to an opponent. There are all sorts of trump coups but this one as played by Ginna (Mrs William) Potte of Midland, Tex., is most unusual.

My only comment on the bidding is that it was interesting and that the final contract was a good one.

West opened and continued diamonds. East discarded a heart on the second diamond and Ginna ruffed. She continued with a club to dummy and a successful spade finesse followed. The hand would have been easy if she had simply gone back to dummy for another finesse but she was afraid that the second club would be ruffed. So, Ginna played the ace of

THE SOUTH AMERICAN LOOK

SOUTH American Indians made their International fashion debut recently in the second showing of the Italian autumn-winter collections.

The Poncho, the Serape, and odd hat shapes from the high Andes come to Peru in Antonio de Luca's "Peruviana" line.

A graceful poncho ties on over the jacket of a mauve wool suit. A fur Poncho covers the deep back décolleté of a black cocktail dress. For coats, the Poncho theme turns into an inset "v" panel at the back.

The high-crowned lady's "Derby" that was a favourite with Peruvian Indian women made its appearance in a wedding costume. The derby was in bridal white satin and was worn with a short, poncho wedding gown.

Stoles, slung casually over one shoulder, were dramatic on suits and coats. De Luca favoured a milk-tipped stole with a flared mustard coloured suit.

From the Pampas, De Luca took dashing Gaucho hats and a skirt-shirt-belt scheme that seems to be inspired by riding costumes. With a grey suit he showed a pink shirt, brown suede belt with a moss green Gaucho hat and a Cowboy scarf tied around the neck.

Contrasting belts and neatly defined waistbands give a two-piece look to almost everything in the collection.

De Luca carries the skirt-shirt idea straight through into evening clothes. He shows a long gown with a green and yellow weave wool skirt, a draped yellow crepe blouse and a triangular woolen shawl. Another had a man tailored shirt and a long Serape.

The jewellery is Aztec in mood. The most dramatic piece is a tangle of gold wire, worn like a hat, with beaten gold leaves dangling over the forehead—UP.

U.S. WIN MEN'S ATHLETIC CONTEST AGAINST RUSSIA

Improve On Their Last Year's 126-109

Triumph By One Point

RUSSIANS SUPERIOR IN WOMEN'S EVENTS

Philadelphia, July 19.

America's athletes overcame Russia's track and field might today in the men's athletic contest between the two countries after a rain-punctuated finale which gave the U.S. a 127-108 victory over the Soviet contingent.

The Russians salvaged the women's match in this two-day meeting at Franklin Field as their women's team beat the Americans by 67-40.

Thunder and lightning accompanied the American victory as their 1,800-metre relay team won the victory which clinched the issue. They also brought with them a driving rainstorm which washed out world decathlon champion Vasily Kuznetsov's bid for a new international standard. Kuznetsov had a new world mark within his grasp in his 10-event marathon when the rain came. But the downpour washed his chances in the final three events—the pole vault, javelin and the 1,500 metres—running the emerald green infield and the track into a slow sodden mess.

Final Disappointment

When the event ended the Soviet star had to settle for a total of 3,350 points, just seven points short of the record, after once being as many as 70 points ahead of the pace he set in compiling his 3,357 world record at Moscow in May. It was the final disappointment to the Russians who did one point worse than they did in the first USA-USSR meeting last year. Then they lost, 126-109, while their women won, 63-44. The Russians combined those totals to claim "victory," but this year it was agreed there would be no numerical reckoning and the men's and women's matches would be tallied separately.—UPI.

At the same time, however, the 11-man National Clay Courts Committee, meeting in emergency session, refused to make public whether it submitted a recommendation on the Olmedo incident to the parent US Lawn Tennis Association.

National Committee chairman Ralph Westcott said only that his group sent the USLTA "a complete, factual report" on the incident, including a detailed statement, press clippings and the referee's card.

Westcott said the National group did not want to reveal whether it had made any recommendation to the USLTA for fear of "prejudicial USLTA action."

A more definite stand was made public by the Clay Courts Tournament Committee, which called the incident a "very serious matter" and urged "something definitely should be done."

The entire controversy stemmed from Olmedo's quarter-final match with Segal on Thursday at the clay courts tournament. Segal, who won, eventually walked off the court in disgust. Olmedo later said he was "very sorry" for his conduct.

Clay Courts Tournament Committee chairman C. B. Hennessy, representing local officials, signed the nine-point indictment of Olmedo.

Sewannur Segowul, an Indian assistant professional from Durban, South Africa, won the Dutch 72 holes open golf championship which ended here today.
He won by one stroke from Gerard De Wit, the leading Dutch professional. Segowul had rounds of 67, 69, 74, 73 for an aggregate of 283. De Wit returned 69, 70, 73, 72 for 264.
Dona Swaenens, of Belgium, was third with 287 (72, 68, 73, 47).—Reuter.

Johansson Reveals His Secret Fear

London, July 19.
World heavyweight boxing champion Ingemar Johansson today admitted he has a "secret fear"—being taken back to his retirement and on Rocky Marciano in an interview printed in the Sunday Graphic.

Asked if he had any "secret fear," the Swedish boxer who took the crown from Floyd Patterson said, "I don't want to be punch drunk when I retire."

Who was the world's greatest boxer? He called Johansson: "Marciano was a good chap." How much money have you from boxing? Johansson: "About $451,000."

Do you have your boxing opponents? Johansson: "Never. To me boxing is a science. You can't keep your brain cool if you hate." Is there any fighter you think might take your title? Johansson: "Anybody's welcome to try."

Do you smoke or drink? Johansson: "Neither." What happened when you were thrown out of the 1952 Olympics ring for not trying? Johansson: "I was only 19, inexperienced, still not hardened. My opponent was bigger and taller and, like me, a counter-puncher. When he stepped forward, I stepped back. I waited for him to lead and he waited for me. The referee might just as easily have thrown him out instead."

What is the secret of your "killer" right-hand punch? Johansson: "I don't know. It's automatic. Perhaps you might call it a reflex."

When will you retire? Johansson: "When Gosta Carlsson, my doctor, tells me to. I shall not go on much longer."

Are you really the "cool character" you're often called? Johansson: "They all say so, and after all, there's nothing really worth worrying about!"—UPI.

NINE-POINT INDICTMENT MADE AGAINST OLMEDO BY TOURNAMENT COMMITTEE

River Forest, Ill., July 19.

A local tournament committee issued a scathing nine-point indictment today against Wimbledon and US Davis Cup champion Alex Olmedo and charged he deliberately lost a match to Abe Segal of South Africa.

At the same time, however, the 11-man National Clay Courts Committee, meeting in emergency session, refused to make public whether it submitted a recommendation on the Olmedo incident to the parent US Lawn Tennis Association.

Civilian Competitor Gains Lead In London-Paris Race

London, July 19.

A fast-moving civilian confounded forecasters, today by beating favoured military competitors to gain first place in the London-Paris air race sponsored by the Daily Mail.

Mr. Eric Rylands of the Skyways Air-Coach Service crossed from London's Marble Arch to the Arc de Triomphe in 41 minutes 41 seconds—a "second best" time that later became the best when stewards ruled out a faster trip made yesterday by Flight Lieutenant Maurice Williams of the Royal Air Force.

Williams, a jet pilot, had clocked 41 minutes 16 seconds on a run from Paris to London.

Disqualification
In announcing the disqualification tonight, a race steward said: "We never declare the reasons for declaring an attempt void, because it might be prejudicial to the competitor. One is only disqualified because there has been a breach of the rules."

Mr. Rylands, who made a return trip to London today in 42 minutes 33 seconds, now has the first and third best times and stands to win £2,500 in prize money if these stand up until the competition ends on Thursday.

Second Place
In second place is Group Captain Norman Ryder of the RAF who sped from Paris to London today in 42 minutes six seconds.

A total of £10,000 in prize money is at stake in the competition, with a top award of £2,500 for the fastest trip in either direction.

The competitors—free to choose their own method of transport, provided they cross the English Channel by air—must obey traffic regulations and speed limits for the ground sections of the 214 miles, which most have covered via motorcycle.

Mr. Ryder's successful combination was motorcycles and helicopter, at each end, with the actual channel crossing made in a special Hunter jet aircraft.

Nearly 70 attempts were being made in the race today and police in London and Paris were kept busy directing traffic and controlling crowds at the start/finish points of the Marble Arch and the Arc de Triomphe.

Squadron Leader Charles Maughan, 35-year-old commanding officer of a Hunter squadron, later moved into third place with a time of 42 minutes 30 seconds of a run from Paris.—Reuter.

Hungary Win Women's World Foil Title

Budapest, July 19.
Hungary won the women's team foil title in the world fencing championships here tonight, beating the holders, the Soviet Union, 3-6 in the final.

In a contest to decide third and fourth places, West Germany beat France 3-2.—Reuter.

An Era Ends

A twenty-year-old era ends at Tottenham next month, when for the first time since 1938 the name of goalkeeper Ted Ditchburn will be missing from the playing staff. Given a free transfer by the Spurs, the England man has joined new professional club Romford where, his old playing colleague, bearded Jack Chisholm is manager.

A Record?

Alan Watell, young Hampshire batsman, scored seven successive threes, in his innings of 38 against Cambridge University. This is believed to be a first-class cricket record.

THIS YEAR'S BRITISH AAA MEETING PRODUCED THE LOWEST STANDARD EVER

Says ARCHIE QUICK

It is over thirty years ago since I first watched the Amateur Athletic Association's annual Championships, and, without any shadow of doubt, this year's two day meeting produced the lowest standard I have ever seen.

There seems little hope of a gold medal at the Olympic Games in Rome next year. Of course, like the Golf "Open", the absence of Continental and American opposition did not help.

What has happened to the AAA coaching scheme, so highly publicised since the athletes came home from Melbourne three years ago? It seems to have borne no fruit.

I would say that apart from sprinter, Peter Radford, and his strictly 100 yards and no further, we can forget a placing at Rome in the track events. Brian Hewson is the only flat runner of world class, and what he could not do at Melbourne when he was four years younger he is not likely to achieve in 1960.

Wood, who won, and Brian Radford, the Devonshire farmer's son who finished third, both train on their own because they live too far from a track. Wood, of Chesham, is the lone wolf of the Yorkshire dale. He is said to be quite frankly after his second success in this race—the first in 1956—by no means a poor lot.

Remarkable Thing
The remarkable thing is that after languishing so long in field events it is in this branch that we have any glimmering of hope to pick up the old bronze medal. It is two Miles Lindsay, Mike Ellis, Arthur Rowe and Colin Smith may between them accomplish some measure of success in the shot, weight, discus and javelin throws.

Perhaps the biggest triumph in the White City meeting was the mile which old-time footie player, we're all familiar with, won in a scorching 4 min 11.2 secs. Stuart of Beccles.

No Tracks
The truth is that the Wood and Radford, thousands of spectators, and no facilities for training and coaching. Outside of London the necessary amenities are scarce, and non-existent, except in the largest cities and towns.

He is a forthright character. He is a leader of the air, in a sport that is rapidly becoming static, for the lack of opportunities, but he does not let the word of Olympic pessimism from the Moscow and Helsinki meet in Moscow in September.

Edmond—34½ old. Malcolm Kneller's 47.2 secs. junior record is a fine, however, of everybody.

Weekend League Lawn Bowls Recreio "A" Out Of Senior Title Race

SURPRISINGLY BEATEN BY CLUBMATES RECREIO "B"

By ROBERT TAY

Inclement weather caused a curtailment of the Colony lawn bowls league programme on Saturday, only four out of the 13 scheduled matches being played off. Although the feature games in the three divisions were among those that were called off, the limited number of matches played were not, however, without their highlights.

Recreio "B" caused quite a sensation in their first division match against their more reputed title-holding clubmates Recreio "A". Having lost to the first division league leaders, IRC "A" by 5-0 the week before, it was generally thought that Recreio "B" would also go down by the same margin of defeat to their "A's".

Instead, the "B's", who were out to prove that they are by no means the junior of the two recreio senior division teams, put up one of the best performances of the season to not only score an upset 4-1 victory but shatter all Recreio "A's" hopes of remaining in the race for championship honours.

Only Challenge

This defeat for Recreio "A" and IRC "A's" 5-0 victory over their clubmates, IRC "B", during the weekend put the Indians further ahead at the top of the league table with 43 points. The only team that can offer a challenge to the potent champions now is Kowloon Dock Club, who are 11 points behind with one game in hand. Playing a great part in Recreio "B's" triumph on Saturday were their four of L. M. Marques, E. B. Ribeiro, G. A. Noronha and F. B. Basto. Driven against C. F. Rozario, A. A. Lopes, they took a 3-0 lead after the first two heads and led all the way up

Four Teams Enter Open Triples Quarter-Finals

One Talkoo Club, one Kowloon Dock Club, one IRC and one CCC combinations yesterday won their third round matches at the Kowloon Bowling Green Club to enter the quarter-finals of the Colony Open Triples lawn bowls championship.

The other four third round matches of the event which were also scheduled for yesterday were called off because of the unplayable condition of the greens.

The best bowls in yesterday's games was seen in the game between A. C. Skotch, A. W. Lapsley and A. E. Elliott of Kowloon Dock and L. A. Rosario, H. A. Ozerio and A. A. Lopes of Recreio.

HIGH STANDARD

Play reached an extremely high standard before the Dock three emerged winners by 22-14. The Recreio three took an early 9-1 lead after four heads and kept up their lead by 11-4 at the end of the 7th head and 14-9 at the end of the 11th head. The Kowloon Dock three, however, hit a brilliant spell on the next seven heads. They scored a five on the 12th head and followed this up with a total of eight shots on the next six successive heads.

RESULTS

Results of yesterday's Colony Open championship games are:

MEN'S OPEN TRIPLES

(Third Round)
H. Lapsley, D. L. Edwards, J. Huosen (IRC) beat W. L. McCall, M. S. Mackay, W. L. Riley (KDC) 21-0; A. M. Omar, R. Tay, P. K. Lau (CCC) beat J. Wall, G. Watt, K. Bodie (HKPSA) 19-10; G. H. Lopes (Recreio) 22-14.

LADIES' OPEN TRIPLES

(Second Round)
Mrs M. Ma, Miss P. Dhabher, Mrs E. Tsok (CCC) beat Mrs I. Dally, Mrs B. Clayton, Mrs J. Crichton (TCC) 25-13; Mrs J. Riley, Mrs Z. Campbell, Mrs J. Beale (KDC) beat Mrs R. C. Barros, Mrs S. Ragi, Mrs C. Leonard (CCC) 20-9.

Australia Take 2-1 Lead In Davis Cup Tie Against Mexico

Mexico City, July 19.

Australia took a 2-1 lead over Mexico in the first round of the American zone Davis Cup eliminations today when Neale Fraser and Roy Emerson outclassed Mario Llamas and Gustavo Palafox, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5, in a doubles match. The Australians need only to share tomorrow's concluding singles matches to win the best-of-five series and qualify to meet Canada in the second round at Montreal on July 24-26.

Llamas, who upset Australia's Rod Laver in singles yesterday, was unsteady at the start of the doubles match. In the fourth game of the first set, the 31-year-old Mexican double-faulted and twice netted easy shots to drop his service and allow the Australians to take a 3-1 lead. Emerson and Fraser, who recently won the Wimbledon doubles title, went on from there to win the opening set comfortably.

In the second set, the Australians protested an "out" call on a shot by Fraser in the first game and the "crowd" of about 4,500 Mexican partisans booed Harry Hopman, Australia's non-playing captain. This incident seemed to fire the Australians to greater heights and they quickly broke Llamas' service in the seventh game. Emerson, playing brilliantly, then held his service in the next game to clinch the set.

Somersault

It was almost the same in the third set, with Llamas again dropping his service in the 11th game to give the Australians 6-5 lead.

In the next game, Fraser took a spectacular somersault on the red clay after returning a hard smash but shook it off and the Australians closed the match when Palafox netted a soft placement at match point. In the concluding singles matches, Llamas will play Fraser and Antonio Palafox will meet Laver.—UPI.

Angry Wolves Get £500,000 Snub SUPER STADIUM PLAN WRECKED BY COUNCIL

By DESMOND HACKETT

WOLVERHAMPTON TOWN COUNCIL brings shame to Soccer by refusing League champions Wolverhampton Wanderers permission to go ahead with a £500,000 super-stadium plan.

It was to have been the proud showpiece of football in the Midlands. A ground fit for the Soccer heroes of Wolves to play in.

These are the facts—
★ Wolves are now a wealthy club. Since the war they have made more than £200,000 profit. They want to reward the people who made this possible—that is you, Mr and Mrs Soccer Fan.

★ Wolves own the ground at their nobly titled establishment of Molineux. They seek no financial aid from the town council. But the town planning committee, without even calling in club officials to discuss the matter, uttered a brusque "NO."

This was the Wolves' plan—
● There would be accommodation for 10,000 more clients, bringing the capacity up to 70,000.

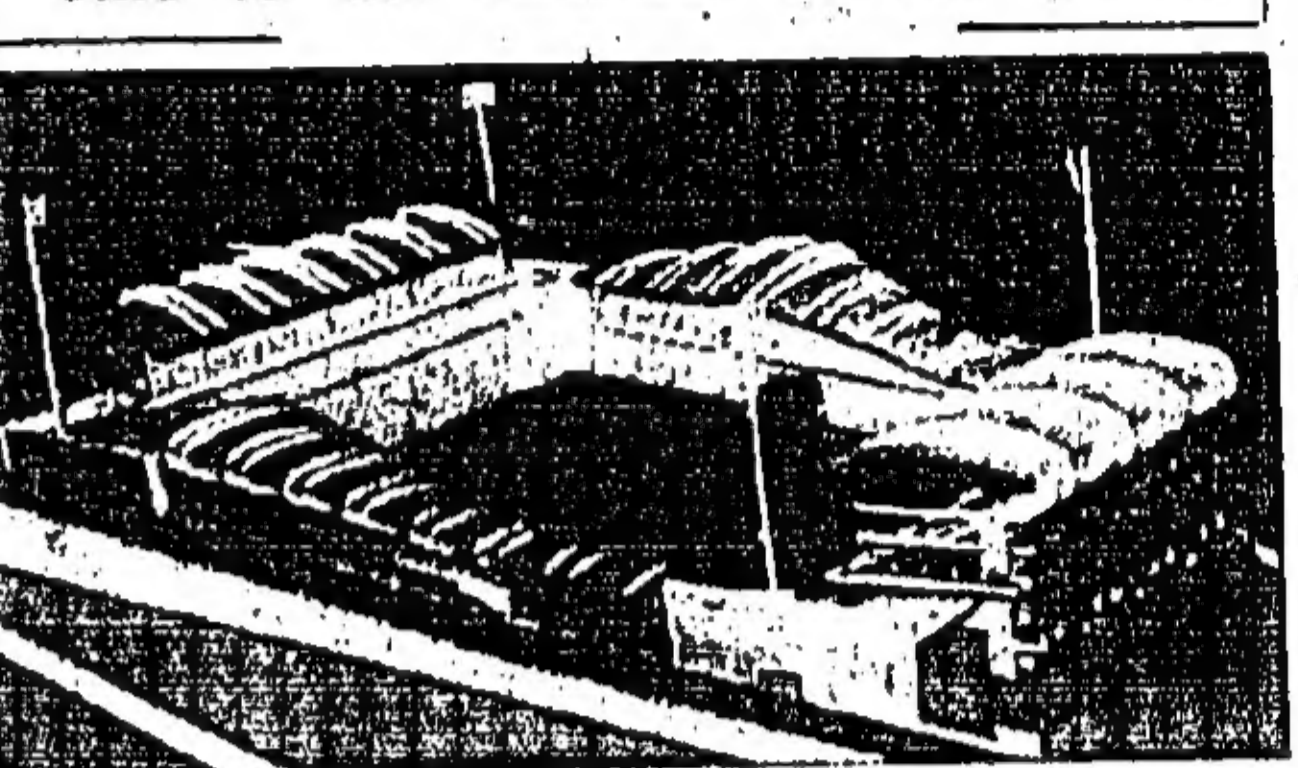

● Most of the new places would be at the 2s. level. Three thousand more could sit down.

● There would be refreshment bars and lounges, adequate toilet facilities, increased turnstiles, and all the modern refinements that make football observation a civilised entertainment.

Reason

And the official reason for the big turn-down: "IT WOULD INTERFERE WITH THE AMENITIES OF THE TOWN." Well, that is exceeding rich. Are these parish pump-thinking councillors suggesting that a modern, artistically-

This is the stadium Wolves want

designed sports arena would distract from such beauties as the nobly outlined dog heaps, the graciously designed factories, the solubrious arch of the uplifting walks from the railway stations standing in grandeur against tasteful drapes of engine smoke?

Or maybe they think the locals would revolt if they were robbed of the joy of jostling and pushing through that squalid little alley through which they must file to watch their beloved Wolves.

I may, of course, have been neglected, but thus far I have not received from Wolverhampton a gay card with the thoughtful inscription: "With you were here."

But many a bold day and a bright night I have been thrilled to be there in Wolverhampton watching battling, brilliant Wolves lustrous in the drabness of the town by triumphs in League contest.

Refusals

And under the golden floodlights they have rip-roared their way to success over the best from Russia, Hungary, and other Continental clubs.

Wolves would not even have had those splendid modern lights had the council been able to have their oil-lamp-minded away.

After refusals Wolves finally pressed on and got the latest lighting system.

This ordinary, homely little town would have been unknown without the greatness of Wolves, the international achievement of Billy Wright, and the thundering gospel for

'FATHER OF ISRAEL' WAS BORN TO FIGHT

Father Of Israel—David Ben-Gurion

OUT of Israel's wild and woolly political picture two weeks ago stormed the gruff, white-haired Father of Israel himself—72-year-old David Ben-Gurion.

But few of Israel's 1,800,000 Jews were unduly worried or surprised. This is the seventh time in the last eleven years that Ben-Gurion has resigned.

This latest, and hottest yet, issue for Israel's constantly bickering four-party coalition government exploded three weeks ago with the announcement that Israel was planning to sell £1 million worth of arms to West Germany.

This is selling arms to the devil, cried the government's two leftist parties who, six months ago, had approved the deal. Two weeks ago, the deal was carried 37-45 by Parliament but, faced with a four-man leftist revolt in his Cabinet, Ben-Gurion was forced to resign.

Terrorist

In 1944, Ben-Gurion again asked Britain to create a Jewish state, warning at the same time that the flood of illegal Jewish immigrants into Palestine would soon provoke a crisis.

While he negotiated, terrorist groups formed behind his back and Palestine rocked within the grip of civil war. Ben-Gurion's tremendous task, fighting the terrorists at home and the British abroad, soon became one of the most agile tight-rope performances in modern history.

The Jewish Legion's position was almost untenable. On the one hand, if Palestine were to be partitioned, there must be equal rights for both Jews and Arabs. On the other, the flood of Jewish refugees could not be made to recede. And so long as there was no Jewish state, he had no means by which to control the snowballing Jewish terrorist element.

Finally, in September, 1947, Britain announced that the mandate would end in six months, solution or not. Ben-Gurion slaved like a madman. Then, on May 14, 1948, his Herculean task accomplished just a few hours before the mandate was due to end, he proclaimed the independent State of Israel.

But the tug-of-war for Israel was not over—nor, indeed, is it today. Within hours of the proclamation, the Arab states moved troops in against Israel's makeshift, mainly ex-terrorist army and again the struggle was on.

Victorious

Somewhat, probably due to the utter desperation of Israel's tired and hungry refugees who at last had a haven to defend, the Jews emerged victorious.

Ben-Gurion's fight, for the brief moment, was over. In November, 1953, he resigned as Prime Minister, saying he needed "spiritual rest." But, before long, he was back in harness, struggling to right Israel's tottering economy.

Ben-Gurion's ideal has materialised—through wars and civil strife, through illegal immigrant armies, through smuggled arms, through Jewish vaccination. But, most of all, through his own, unshakable faith in the destiny of the Jews.

The man was born to fight. He is not likely to give up now.

Allies

Then, in 1910—when he was just 24—he became leader of the Zionist Party and editor of its journal. Soon after, however, he enrolled at Constantinople University and graduated as a lawyer just as the war clouds gathered across Europe.

Convinced that victory for Germany and Turkey would mean the end of his ideal, Ben-Gurion became a vociferous supporter of the Allies. The Turks threw him out of the country and he sailed to the U.S., where he helped form the Jewish Legion. The Legion eventually joined General Allenby and the British Army in Palestine.

The victory celebrations had hardly begun in Britain before the indefatigable Ben-Gurion was knocking at the doors of Lord Balfour and various Cabinet Ministers. The result: the famous Balfour declaration, which vowed for the establishment of a state in Palestine. Meanwhile, Palestine became a British mandate.

Ben-Gurion then threw himself back into his Zionist work. In 1920, he became a member of the general council of the Zionist Organisation. He became one of the organisers of the Jewish Labour Party and Secretary-General of the Histadrut and travelled the world recruiting support.

Bitter blow

In 1933, he was elected to the executive of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, and was its chairman from 1935 to 1948.

Ben-Gurion's goal seemed near when, in 1937, Britain proposed a plan to divide Palestine into Jewish and Arab states. But, two years later, the plan was shelved and, in an abrupt

Carry on

Later, he announced that he would, "to my regret," carry on as Premier and Defence Minister in an Israeli caretaker government.

If records count, however, the man who founded the first Jewish State in 2,000 years is now his adopted name does, after all, mean "Son of a Young Lion."

The man who was born David Green, in the small factory town of Pleske, Poland, on October 16, 1893, was already fighting at 14 as leader of a secret Zionist society. Since then, he has been in and out of trouble with scarcely a pause.

For from the day the 17-year-old youth left Czarist-oppressed Poland (then a Russian province) to help build the Promised Land in Ottoman Palestine, to the day when he left politics for the life of a pioneer in the Negev Desert, Ben-Gurion's life has been one long struggle for his ideal.

Even at 77, like many of his European Jewish

OWING to the boring of holes by hooligans in bits of sculpture erected in small towns, sculptures are being carried to state when delivering their works the number of holes in each.

At Kidney St Blaise a furious argument is in progress over an abstract figure on the village green. There are now four holes in it, and the sculptor, Thomas Fenett, swears there were only three in his original figure. The position is complicated by the claim of two critics that the extra hole has improved the work of art.

Prognosis: Isn't this business of holes in sculpture rather an old joke. Yes. But so many people haven't seen it yet, and still take these abstract fooleries seriously.

Evans v Balzarotti
FROM "Iron-Nostril" Balzarotti's training quarters outside Abbehammer a report comes that the Perugia virtuoso punches a tremendous left-nostril punch. He buffeted a pea seven inches yesterday, foining the right nostril, and then leading with the left. This unorthodox style is more tiring than the rhythmic thrusts of Evans, using the entire nose. Said Evans' trainer, Matt Jones: "When Evans gets going the pea won't know what hit it." For luck Evans wears on a chain round his neck the golden pea he won at the contest arranged by the organizers of monique.

A kind thought?
"I HIT my husband over the head with an aluminum saucepan, as it is lighter than the iron one," said a wife the other day. Whether this was a concession to her own lack of strength, or to his, is a moot point. Anyhow, her action provided phrenologists with what they call the bump of marital disagreement.

SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING

The 'Goliath' at Hinkley Point.

WORLD'S BIGGEST CRANE HELPS BUILD BRITAIN'S NUCLEAR POWER STATION

DESIGNED and built to cope with nuclear age constructional tasks the world's biggest travelling crane has come into operation at the largest nuclear power station in the world now being built at Hinkley Point in Somerset.

This "Goliath" crane, moving on rails, can travel the entire length of the site for a distance of 100 yards. With a span of 250 ft. between its two legs and 240 ft. in height, the crane can pass over the power station buildings. Able to raise loads of 400 tons at a rate of one foot a minute, "Goliath" is employed to lift major units of equipment such as steam-raising units and reactor pressure vessels which have been fabricated or assembled on other parts of the site.

LIFTING FEATS

Product of the engineering firm of Babcock and Wilcox Limited, who with English Electric and Taylor Woodrow Limited were given a contract 29 months ago to erect the first five hundred megawatt nuclear power station for the Central Electricity Generating Board, "Goliath" is a straddling the reactor building, can perform lifting tasks in three hours which would take three weeks by ordinary lever and hoist methods.

Another achievement has been the installation 2,000 feet offshore in the Bristol Channel of a cooling water intake caisson through which seawater will pass into the station at a rate of 35 million gallons hourly. The entire site covers 140 acres and includes reserve area for a similar nuclear power station at a later date.

Neo-Georgian Style Building In Aluminium

A NEW office building, a house, recently completed in London, is neo-Georgian in appearance.

The seven-storey building is under long lease to Aluminium (Canada) Limited, a subsidiary of the Aluminium Limited Group of Companies. The choice of aluminium is used for some noteworthy details. Exterior evidence of the use of aluminium can be seen in the windows and in the passer-by the most striking example of the use of aluminium is the massive main doors, which are faced with satin-anodized aluminium sheet. Each leaf bears eight rectangular panels.

The two passenger lifts at the rear of the entrance hall are finished entirely in aluminium, and the main staircase in the building makes use of a blend of finishes.

The balustrade has a handrail of anodized aluminium extruded section, the standards are constructed in anodized mild steel, and with aluminium ferrules, every ninth standard being of aluminium and the top and bottom rails are of anodized steel bar.

The firm is also manufacturing conveyor belting in PVC which is flameproof and is made to the exacting standards of the British coal mining industry. It is being introduced to Poland, Belgium and Germany.

About 75 per cent of the firm's products are exported for use in the marine, oil and mining industries as well as for fire-fighting. (F. Reddaway and Co. Ltd., St. Anthony's, Newcastle upon Tyne, England.)

Passenger Lifts For Small Homes

A PASSENGER lift—claimed to be a new conception in the design of lifts—is being produced by a north of England firm. It has been produced to cater for the needs of small hotels, flats, offices and private homes.

The firm says that the incorporation of well-known principles, plus the introduction of a number of novel features and the standardisation of certain measurements enables the lift to be produced and installed at a price far below the traditional type.

The lift is supported on one wall, therefore eliminating the necessity of an expensive brick shaft and motor room. All that is required is a simple enclosure.

Pre-locking, electro-mechanical magnetic doors ensure that the lift cannot be operated unless the doors are positively closed. Capacity is three persons and the car is of steel panelled construction lined with vinyl plastic. (Pleckerings Limited, Globe Elevator Works, Stockton-on-Tees, England.)

Lighter, Cheaper, More Flexible Fire Hose

FIRE-FIGHTING in many parts of the world is helped by a firm in North East England who specialise in industrial hose and industrial rubber products.

They are now producing a new type of fire hose which is claimed to be a better yet cheaper product. It is said to be stronger than conventional hose material, lighter, more flexible, and with greater resistance to abrasion.

The firm is also manufacturing conveyor belting in PVC which is flameproof and is made to the exacting standards of the British coal mining industry. It is being introduced to Poland, Belgium and Germany.

About 75 per cent of the firm's products are exported for use in the marine, oil and mining industries as well as for fire-fighting. (F. Reddaway and Co. Ltd., St. Anthony's, Newcastle upon Tyne, England.)

Large Sheet Saw

A LARGE sheet saw designed to meet the special demands of the building and construction trades, in providing a means of cutting the insulating, lining and many other sheet materials used in the construction of walls, ceilings, roofs, floors and other surfaces, has been introduced in Britain. (Jorge, Neil and Company (Sheffield) Ltd., Sheffield 11, England.)

Weekly Survey Of The American Economy

STEEL STRIKE EFFECTS

MAY EVEN REVERSE UPWARD CLIMB

New York, July 19.

The U.S. was hit by a steel strike last week—the third in seven years—which at best will have a mild effect in the economy but could mean a serious step backward, depending on its length.

Although the steel industry represents only some five per cent of the nation's total economic effort, its prolonged standstill and the creeping paralysis spreading to other closely related industries were almost certain to stop, and even reverse, the upward climbing curve of economic indicators over the booming first half of 1959.

At mid-week, with the strike only two days old, Pennsylvania Railroad already furloughed more than 6,000 workers and a small Canadian metal working plant in Ontario stopped production—to name only two instances of what will develop into a pattern as the strike drags on over a few weeks.

Stocks

Steel-using industries, with an estimated 20,000,000 to 21,000,000 tons of steel in stocks or in the pipelines of transportation and warehouses, were confident they had enough to keep going for two, three months. Even Detroit, claimed it can start its 1960 model production at mid-September with steel stocks at hand.

As in the previous two strikes, the longest one on record, lasting 58 days in 1952, and the shorter 34-day strike in 1955, the biggest loser may be the government in reduced corporation earnings and workers income taxes. But a lot of other people will lose before the government does.

Estimated weekly loss in workers for the half million 1960 steelworkers: $70,000,000. Estimated weekly loss in production: $300,000,000.

The issue—as before, disagreement on what constitutes an inflationary wage demand. The industry claims an alleged 25 cents an hour raise asked by the Union would bring on an inflationary price boom affecting the whole economy. The union claims all it wants is 15 cents an hour which can easily be absorbed by management profits.

Govt Plan

The government will not use the Taft-Hartley Law 80-day Court injunction, stopping the walkout until the situation reaches emergency proportions. But already there is talk in Washington of a priority plan that would channel available supplies for defence and atomic energy purposes should the first signs of shortages appear.

Last week, the last full week of steel production, the mills operated at 93.2 per cent of capacity, turning out 2,252,000 tons. This was 37,000 tons above the July 4 Independence Day week but far below previous weeks' levels. For this past week, the industry scheduled an 82.8 per cent output of 2,344,000 tons but did not even get a decent start on it.

Steel warehouse inventories—meaning steel stored for the use of customers but not yet in their hands—were at a record level of 3.7 million tons when the strike started. This, the American Steel Warehouse Association claimed, was one million tons higher than at the beginning of 1959. Steady rising sales during the first half of 1959 prevented warehouse inventory expansion beyond 10 per cent, the Association said.

Foreign Imports

The first protest against steel imports came from a Houston, Texas, steel plant sales manager after 21,000 tons of Belgian and Japanese steel reached there on the first day of the strike.

He charged European and Japanese steelmakers were trying to take over the market during the strike and at a fat price, too. He charged that last Wednesday the price of foreign steel jumped by six to nine dollars. He also said the five ship-loads in Houston—totaling over 21,000 tons—in one day compared with a daily average of about 20 tons in the first quarter of 1959.

But one thing of the arrival of the shipment was, obviously, a coincidence. Experts pointed out it takes about two months to deliver an order of steel from Europe—and possibly more from Japan.

Car Industry

Of the affiliated industries that would suffer most from the strike, car makers in Detroit were confident they would meet their July schedule—already reduced by model changeover—and embark on the 1960 model production despite the steel shortage. The car News Magazine, said car and truck output, this past week, was estimated at 155,043 units, compared with 148,779 last week and 101,990 in the same week a year ago.

The railroad and trucking industries will probably suffer most and right away. Pennsylvania, already suffering from a strike, 8,000 and thousands were expected to be laid off all over the eastern U.S. rail network. During the five-week 1956 strike, carloadings dropped by 800,000—which means that some 100,000 cars were idled—and railroads lost $40 million a week in gross revenues.

EUROPE RECOVERS FROM BACKLASH OF U.S. RECESSION

Geneva, July 19.

Western Europe, recovering from the backlash of the U.S. recession, should continue its slow economic expansion in 1959, the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe predicted last week.

An ECE report said that if all goes well the rate of growth of gross national product for western Europe "will reach a level rather near that of 1958, compared with two per cent in 1957."

The report said that expanding forces, already present in the second half of last year, "are in general being gradually reinforced so that a revival of economic activity appears to be definitely underway."

RAPID RATES

"Relatively rapid rates of expansion" were forecast for West Germany, Denmark, Italy, Holland, Finland, Greece, Spain and Yugoslavia.

Other industrial nations of western Europe will enjoy a more moderate rate of growth. Highest rates of expansion, "should tend to strengthen the forces of recovery in smaller western European countries," the report said.

The report's moderate optimism was strengthened by solid western-European foreign-exchange reserves and a general price stability.

INDICATIONS

Industrial production, although no higher in the first quarter this year than in 1958, is now edging forward and "there are indications of an even more pronounced and widespread upturn," the report noted. It made these other points:

★ West Germany, Italy, Denmark, Holland, Switzerland and Ireland are enjoying moderate industrial expansion.

★ There are "indications" of an upturn in Britain, Sweden, Norway, Finland and Belgium.

★ Austria and France are about to enjoy an upturn in industrial output out of their inevitable position.

★ And industrial activity in southern Europe "maintains a relatively rapid growth."

The report's moderate optimism was strengthened by solid western-European foreign-exchange reserves and a general price stability.

Industrials Suffer Worst Shakeout Since Sterling Crisis

London, July 19.

Industrial shares have suffered a shakeout last week which has been the worst for share prices since September 1957 at the time of the sterling crisis and the hiking of the bank rate to seven per cent.

Fears of a general election were the chief cause for the fall in industrial equities, but even without a profit-taking, on Tuesday and reaction to Wall Street were contributory causes. Buyers stayed out of the market in industrial shares, but Friday which meant there were not enough investors to mop up the steady flow of selling.

On the other hand gilt-edged had a very good week with medium and long-dated issues in particular demand. Short-dated issues have not done so well, in addition to the investment demand in government securities there has also been a certain amount of switching.

High coupon dominion and colonial stocks have also been in demand.

Profit-taking

In foreign bonds there was speculative demand in Greek, Japanese and Romanian issues early in the week which turned to profit-taking later and general losses, although the demand for Japanese continued and they remained firmer.

A feature of the week has been the rise in the premium which British investors must pay for dollar stocks to 1 1/4 per cent. This move into Treasury Atlantic stocks has been largely caused by election fears, that if a Labour government were returned to power the premium would rise sharply.

Industrial markets were dull all week until Friday when the business contracted sharply and the small selling dried up, and prices edged higher. The Financial Times Industrial Index had its first rise of the week on that day with a 1.9 lift to 232.5 having fallen 11.1 points to 230.4 before Friday's recovery, the index, which shows for the week a drop of 0.2.

Hedging

Steel prices have been least affected and it is believed that large investors have been buying these and hedging with U.S. Treasury bills on fears of a nearby general election. The speculative issues, particularly in property shares have been the worst hit this past week, but losses are almost universal, affecting all sections of the industrial market.

The world prices for petroleum products have fallen this week to points lower than they were a year ago and this has further unsettled the market in oil shares and it has been very irregular all week. Local support on Friday introduced a slightly firmer tone.

Despite the publication of the quarterly reports the market has been quiet with interest centred elsewhere. Most issues closed the week firm, not only influenced by other markets but also because investors had had time to digest the more favourable quarters.

Rubbers have tended to drift.

Wall Street Stocks Decline On Steel Strike

London, July 19.

Stocks declined on reduced volume when half a million steel workers went on strike during the past week.

NY Cotton Futures Irregularly Higher

New York, July 19.

Cotton futures moved through an irregularly higher and quiet week, with near months showing some strength and far positions in a slight downward adjustment.

At Friday's finish futures were 24 points higher to 10 1/2 cents, up 1/2 cent from 10 1/4 cents. Only five notices were issued and the small amount of cotton tendered dropped open interest in New York futures to a record low, reflecting government light control over cotton marketing which has left very little free cotton available.

Low Prices

Late Friday, however, the Senate passed and sent on to the House a bill permitting sales of some government cotton to domestic mills at low prices, enabling the mills to better compete with foreign production. Agriculture Secretary Benson opposes the bill.

On the political scene, Sen. Herman Tamm called for immediate action to shield U.S. cotton growers and manufacturers from the competition of imported cloths and clothing.

The U. S. Tariff Commission decided against recommending any cut in import quotas for long staple cotton.

The Commodity Credit Corp. will open bids by July 27 for the 1957-58 and prior season's stock of cotton, beginning August 15 it will include some 1958-59 cotton, which has been produced and marketed.

Sales are expected to be fairly heavy.—UPI.

Japanese Textile Exports To Canada To Be Under Quota

Ottawa, July 19.

The Canadian and Japanese governments are continuing discussions on steps to keep the flow of Japanese textiles into Canada on an "orderly" basis, Finance Minister Donald Fleming said last Saturday.

The Minister indicated that the decision had not yet been made on the size and type of quotas and regulations to be imposed by the Japanese government on exports of sun rayon, and other textile clothing products.

Japan had decided on June 10 not to issue any more permits to Canada to permit negotiations to reach some final arrangements on this matter, Fleming said.

No Reprieve For Banished Man

The police were not prepared to recommend the cancellation of the deportation order against Lau Sau for whom the Rev Denham Cray, welfare officer of the Discharged Prisoners' Aid Society, pleaded at Kowloon Court last week.

And when the life story of the man was made known this morning when he appeared on remand, Judge A. A. Huggins said Lau Sau was not the person he ought to release.

Enforced

He was given three years' goal for returning from banishment.

Judge Huggins repeated the request of the prosecution that banishment must be understood that a deportation order must be enforced.

Last Monday, Mr Cray pleaded on behalf of Lau, saying that the DPA would find employment and care for the accused if he were allowed to stay in Hongkong.

Mr Cray said the accused committed robbery to get money to repay a loan.

Following the plea Judge Huggins asked the police for their opinion about the deportation order.

This morning Chief Inspector T. W. Wheeler told the court that all the relevant papers and known facts had been placed before the Commissioner of Police who was not prepared to recommend that the order be rescinded.

Dismissed

Mr Wheeler said the accused became known to the police when he joined the Police force after the end of the war. Later he was dismissed and he went to Canton and joined the police there. He served in that force for some time, then resigned. Then he came to Hongkong again.

On his arrival he was found in possession of dutiable cigarettes and was sentenced to two months.

After leaving gaol, he returned to Canton and again joined the Police force.

He came to Hongkong again in 1949 when the Communists came to power.

Mr Wheeler added, "The Crown understands that on this occasion the accused brought with him his service revolver and ammunition."

In 1950 the police stopped the accused in a car. He was found to have a fully-loaded revolver, a dagger, and a piece of adhesive tape.

On His Way

He admitted then, in the course of inquiry, that he was on his way to commit a robbery. And it was during this inquiry that the accused confessed that he was responsible for an armed robbery committed earlier the same year.

It was for this confessed crime that he was sentenced to nine years and recommended for banishment.

Mr Wheeler added that the accused was released from gaol in 1950 but was sent away. The Rev. Loong Kun interceded for him and succeeded in getting the banishment order rescinded. Instead, accused was placed under police supervision for two years.

However, while under supervision, he was accused of another robbery.

Not Guilty

And when he was brought before the Court he was found not guilty because of lack of identification.

He was released and was told he must leave Hongkong. He elected to go to Macao and was given $25 and told never to return again.

Mr Wheeler said the police would ask the court to impose a sentence to show the accused and other deportees that banishment orders must be enforced as they were made after full investigation and due consideration.

ALLEGED STATEMENT IN CORRUPTION CASE

'You're A Fool To Go Straight'

The accused in a corruption case was alleged to have told a fellow conspirator who wanted to go straight, that he would be a fool to do so.

Detective Inspector Chan Shun-shun, of the Anti-Corruption Branch said this when outlining the case against a resettlement screener on charges of conspiracy and corruption before Mr J. T. Morris at Central Magistrate's Court.

The accused was Mak Siu-ki. His fellow conspirator, already convicted and sentenced, was Leslie Lok Chung-leung.

THEIR PACT

Inspector Chan said that Mak and Lok had entered into an agreement that they would share whatever proceeds they received. Accused, together with Leslie Lok Chung-leung, falsified the particulars of two people, Lo Yung and Ma Yung (prosecution witnesses), stating that they were residents in local buildings.

In return for the $500 which they paid, they received two white cards and screening forms which they returned later with their fingerprints attached. They also handed over a list of the particulars of their families.

Inspector Chan said that when Lok had a change of heart and told Mak about it, he reimbursed the total amount of the money received from the seven families.

Hearing is continuing.

THREE bowls matches in the singles championship and one in the Pairs championship were decided yesterday afternoon, the best game being provided by A. H. Basto and A. Macfarlane, on the Police green.

Although Macfarlane led on the eighth head by 12 shots to two, Basto staged a remarkable recovery and with two fours reduced the lead. He then went on to score regularly and won by 21 shots to 17 on the 21st head.

Mr Chow Again

Sir,—To E. Glasston and P. Burr, who condemn Mr N. T. Chow as being a person of "infantile intelligence" merely because he happened to have opinions different from their own:

From the tone of your belligerent letter, it is obvious that both of you consider yourselves very learned and clever; it is also plain that both of you are suffering from an acute attack of megalomania. Why is it that people like you two, who claim to be educated and civilised, still censure others of different opinions? Aren't you behaving like the narrow-minded, obstinate people of mediaeval times? Why can't you be tolerant in your views, and let Mr N. T. Chow express his ideas of The Old Man and the Sea? What right have you to call Mr N. T. Chow a pedant, a person with "child-like views"? What right have you to insist him by saying that you are "fed up" with his articles? You are not forced to read them, you know.

Revolutions have brought about freedom of speech and freedom of the press. If Mr Chow does not like the film Old Man and the Sea, surely he has a right to say so. In whatever type of language he chooses. If you do not agree with him you may object, IN A MODERATE, CIVILISED, FRIENDLY MANNER. But by heaping insults on Mr Chow, and asking that his letters be rejected, you are undoing the best progress which man has achieved so far; namely, love and tolerance. Both of you may be lacking in intellect, but you are lacking in culture and charity.

L. YUE

Bad Taste

Sir,—Reading this column in your fine newspaper is a pleasure. I look forward to daily. At various times I have been amused, sobered, entertained and educated by the different topics discussed in public letters to you.

But Saturday's nauseating and self-righteous letter by Messrs E. Glasston and P. Burr left me with a bad taste in my mouth.

These two gentlemen—if they can be called that—are fine ones to talk about "insinuations on common decency" or, for that matter, standards of education.

Letters To The Editor

It is one thing to attack a correspondent on his opinions, but to revile him on his educational status and to insist that there is something lacking in Mr N. T. Chow's upbringing because his film criticisms may be in some way responsible for a loss in cinema box-office receipts, is the height of snobishness and stupidity (in that order).

I agree with Mr Percy Larkin that Messrs Glasston and Burr deserve readers' respect for not hiding under pseudonyms, and would like to add that my estimation for them has gone up a few notches when I note that they have the "civic" (not American) life in the Oxford English Dictionary to express themselves in the public eye with spellings like "popycock", "criticisms", and "criticised", among other grammatical errors. Speaking of dictionaries and their contents, I searched long and in vain for the word

"croach" (fourth paragraph of the letter by Messrs Glasston and Burr) in the Oxford English Dictionary.

Mr Chow's Reply

Sir,—Why should Missed Cinesmagor be "bothered" and "annoyed" by my views, though they are "refreshingly surprising" and "not arrived at in a haphazard and nonchalant way"? Isn't his reaction to my views a shade too strong and a "highly subjective" one?

Isn't his view on films and film criticisms "highly subjective" too? One would hesitate to dismiss our local film critics as sweepingly as he did, though one often disagrees with them; and who but a "highly subjective" critic would call his description of anything he dislikes (which is "deplorable" only to his "subjective" mind) a "proper name"? Has it ever occurred to him that a critic may praise a film because he sincerely likes it (though it displeases Missed Cinesmagor), and to accuse him of cowardice or dishonesty means the accuser's intolerance?

No, I don't "entertain" the idea of "tossing my pen" with your critic to "entertain" readers like Missed Cinesmagor, because I don't believe film criticisms are written chiefly to "entertain"; and his suggestion betrays he doesn't really take films seriously. My ideas may be negligible, but my intention to express them is always serious. Frankly, I can't feign gratitude to his magnanimous (but so condescending) "defence" of my writings, as I find his superior attitude far more bothersome and annoying than that of my "critics". It is always easy to grumble, but it is more worthwhile to reinforce it with a corresponding constructive suggestion. If he is so interested in films and holds the local critics in such scorn, why should he express his views to show why their criticisms are devoid, otherwise his observations can only be regarded as "condemnation without evidence". Please learn to be a constructive critic before criticising the critics. Missed Cinesmagor (who is certainly misled in my "highly subjective" view).

N. T. CHOW
P.S. Why don't you "entertain" us with a real critique of a certain film to prove your point, Missed Cinesmagor?
